

Callsigns

DFRS does hold details of Callsigns but this information is being withheld under Section 36 of Freedom of Information Act 2000 which provides an exemption from the right to information if disclosure of the information to a member of the public would cause “prejudice to the effective conduct of public affairs”. The mobilisation call signs for the officer response cars are used by fire officers. These would be used in major incidents. Information could be used to determine our mobilisation strategy and could be used maliciously by terrorists when planning a major incident, thus prejudicing the conduct of public affairs. We maintain that disclosure would or would be likely to cause the types of prejudice or inhibition listed above. UK national threat levels have been taken into consideration. It is in the public interest that fire services are unimpeded in their duties and not compromised in the methods they use to mobilise to an incident, particularly to a major incident.

Vehicle registration number of Officers’ vehicles

DFRS does hold the registration numbers of officers’ vehicles. However, this information is being withheld under Section 40(2) of Freedom of Information Act 2000 which provides an exemption from the right to information if the information relates to Personal Information – Information relating to individuals. Registration numbers of officer’s vehicles, combined with other information that is in the public domain and the fact that officers contribute to the costs of the vehicles for their private use is personal information. As such, we maintain that release of this information would breach data protection principles.
